

It is clearly in the public interest to limit the number of broadcast outlets one corporation can own. The ownership of the airwaves by a few media giants is a threat to democracy because it gives a small number of people control over almost all public discourse and delivery of information.